

You're Going to Notice Something Very Different on "The View"

Things are going to be changing on ABC's toxic mess of a show "The View."

The reason why is because things have gotten so nasty, negative, and mean on this awful show, that the president of ABC actually had to step in and say "ENOUGH."

Apparently, things have gotten so bad on the show with all the screaming and telling and personal jabs, that viewers have complained – and complained so much, that the actual president of ABC had to have a pow-wow with the cat ladies.

The biggest source of angst is between Joy Behar and Meghan McCain – and a couple of weeks back, they got in yet another huge fight over anti-semitism.

Apparently, that was the final straw for the head of ABC, who finally stepped in to tell the two women to cool it with the personal attacks.

Production sources told TMZ that ABC News President Kim Godwin called a last-minute meeting of "The View's" co-host and producers telling them they need to improve the behind-the-scenes culture of the show immediately. The virtual meeting was called after ABC was flooded with pleas to fire McCain over her attacks on Behar, who it should be noted attacks the conservative quite a bit as well.

The insiders said that Godwin, who only just took over as head of ABC earlier this month, told the women that things have gotten way too personal on the show, not with the issues being debated, but with the personal attacks. She added that it's coming off as toxic to viewers and that she does not want the program to move in this direction any further.

McCain, however, was not having any of it. Sources said that she stormed out of the meeting before it ended because she felt like she was being "attacked."

During the segment on Monday that sparked this fight, expressed her desire to see the same energy put into actions against Jews from the left.

"I would love Democrats to put that same type of energy on to what's happening on the left, because, quite frankly, this is how people get red-pilled," she said. "They're red-pilled when they see the blatant bias in the media because the media doesn't want the 'Squad' to look bad. They just want [Marjorie Taylor Greene] to look bad."

Behar responded by saying that she resented what the conservative was saying. She said she's been fighting against anti-Semitism on the show for "25 years," and that McCain should have some "respect." That's when things really exploded, as McCain was not having any of it.

I am definitely no “fan” of Meghan, but it’s absurd to think that it’s her that’s the most toxic one.

Joy Behar is literally one of the most miserable-looking people I’ve ever seen.

Granted, Meghan is not far behind her – but still, she’s nowhere near as awful as Joy.
