"The big question now is: 'Who will replace Meghan?'" the source told Closer Weekly. "She was always ready with a counterpoint, and she loved a good fight."

The insider added that while "there's a fine line to being in the hot seat," McCain handled the position of being the token conservative "pretty well."

"She was perfect for live TV," the source said. "It's going to be interesting to see who they try out for Meghan's spot ... she will be hard to replace."

McCain announced on Thursday that she would be leaving "The View" at the end of this month.

"So I'm just going to rip the band-aid off. I am here to tell all of you, my wonderful co-hosts and the viewers at home that this is going to be my last season here at 'The View,'" she revealed live on the show. "I will be here through the end of July to finish out the season with all of you, which I am grateful for. This was not an easy decision. It took a lot of thought and counsel and prayer and talking to my family and my close friends."

“COVID has changed the world for all of us, and it changed the way at least for me – the way I am looking at life, the way I’m living my life, the way I want my life to look like,” she added. “When I think about where I want Liberty to have her first steps and her first words, I just have this really wonderful life here.”

ABC also released a statement about her departure to Entertainment Tonight.
