

More Workers Are Starting Their Jobs In Debt Under “Training Repayment Agreements”

A new study finds that more workers are starting their jobs in debt to their employers under Training Repayment Agreements. Under these agreements, workers who quit their jobs or are fired within a set time period are required to pay their employers money. Debt amounts can be upwards of $40,000.

Originally found on Forbes Read More